Three preset timed cycles allow you to control the amount of coffee that is ground, giving you complete control over portion sizes. Unlike other grinders that pulverize your coffee beans into pellets, the Bunn G92T HD coffee grinder uses precision burrs that shave the coffee beans into a size and shape that allows for maximum flavor extraction during the brewing process.<http://ankamet.com/userfiles/deko-2200-manual.xml>

The Bunn G92T HD tall portion control coffee grinder accepts larger brew funnels for Bunn System III, Dual, and other larger Bunn brewer models. As a component in the Bunn BrewWISE total brewing system, the double hopper grinder has an interface port that allows you to connect the grinder to your Bunn brewer. Batch information is communicated between the brewer and grinder in order to brew a consistent, quality product. The Bunn G92T HD tall portion control coffee grinder requires a 120V, 60 Hz, and 9.4 amp electrical connection. If you need your items by a certain date, Expedited shipping availability may vary. If it helps, I use only the Kalita and the French Press, and have no need for espresso. Should be a big step up. Just make sure it runs, and bring some coffee to test grind. If it runs, buy it. Worst case scenario, you can resell it for at least what you paid and probably more. You'll probably want to give it a very thorough cleaning if it's used. I'd recommend doing some research before taking the burrs off, they can be hard to align correctly when you remount them on the commercial grinders. Maybe use some grindz instead of taking out the burrs. I also think you can mod it to be a bunnzilla, but I vaguely recall that there's a complication with the G9. HomeBarista will have the answer. The burrs appear to be in great shape, as is the whole machine. It grinds wonderfully consistently and has upped my coffee game big time. Here's the kicker: it's freakin' huge. The G92 seems to be of a more manageable size. My advice: don't waste your time or money on the grinder. The G92 series uses a worm drive grinding mechanism. These are the cheapest and least consistent in terms of grind size. Look for a Bunn G1,2,3. These actually have flat burrs and will be a little step up in terms of consistency compared to the Hario. Among other things, they reference flat burrs. Are they just totally confused. All rights reserved. Back to top. You can be assured that you will have fast shipping to anywhere in Canada. The KRYO 65 combines dosing grinders characterized by innovative technologies and perfect ergonomics, with great style. The ergonomic design and quality of the material provide excellent stability even in situations of intense use. The powerful motor allows grinding at a low speed, which prevents the bean from overheating to maintain its aroma and keep the flavor intact. Rancilio offers models with different capacities. Robust and reliable, the entire MD range offers excellent performance at a low cost. Doses can be varied from 0.17 to 0.35 Oz 5 to 10 g, with a capacity for 49.4 Oz 1,400 g of coffee beans. Plus guaranteed best prices. From 4 seconds to 150 seconds in time.

If plate spacing is giving you the right coarseness, timing is adjustable. First adjust the coarseness of the grind is correct. To fine slows the coffee threw the filter. To coarse waste coffee. Then adjust the volume with the timer. Not knowing if you have the digital or manual timers, I'll include a manual for you to reference. Page 8 has your adjustments. Recent Buyer 4.0 out of 5 stars In particular, the height of the unit pretty much prevents being able to place it below or in front of shelving. It is a very sturdy unit, and was easy to calibrate. I purchased it primarily to grind Turkish style coffee, and in that role it has performed very well. The grind is very similar to that of Bravo, Loumidis, or Mehmet Efendi, using Columbian Supremo beans. It is on par or better than the grind with a hand grinder, and superior to noncommercial grinders such the Cappresso. Also handles any grind above Turkish to very course.

Overall quite pricey for a home grinder, but works very well and is fast. For the past year, every single Bunn G1 grinder vibrates so loudly that customers complain. In speaking with Bunn's Tech Support last week, I was told that Bunn will no longer replace defective units, which is basically all of them. They'll happily take your money, but won't guarantee a properly functioning grinder. Unacceptable. I've switched to the Mahlkoenig GH2 grinder. Much better quality for basically the same price. Done with Bunn. Solid bulk grinder for different options. I have two Starbucks baristas in the house and they have only experienced one problem in the combined eight years they have been using them and that was fixed by cleaning the machine.
